 what it is.) Which of the following aspects of baseball does Nate Silver not say is esp difficult to measure and predict? hitting (batting) defense (fielding) pitching how minor leaguers will fare in the major leagues In analyzing why scouts didn't recognize the star talent in Dustin Pedroia, explains that our first instinct is often: to focus on what's flashy instead of what's fundamental to analyze data to death instead of looking at the broader picture to only value individuals who act or look noticeably "different" than the to place information into a small, preset number of categories In the "post-Moneyball era," how would you describe the role and perceive portance of traditional scouting? 		Reading check #6: Silver chapter 3 Feb. 8, 2024
difficult to measure and predict? hitting (batting) defense (fielding) pitching how minor leaguers will fare in the major leagues 3. In analyzing why scouts didn't recognize the star talent in Dustin Pedroia, explains that our first instinct is often: to focus on what's flashy instead of what's fundamental to analyze data to death instead of looking at the broader picture to only value individuals who act or look noticeably "different" than the to place information into a small, preset number of categories 4. In the "post-Moneyball era," how would you describe the role and perceive portance of traditional scouting?	1.	What's PECOTA? (You don't have to remember what it stands for; just describe what it is.) difficult to measure and predict? hitting (batting) defense (fielding) pitching how minor leaguers will fare in the major leagues 3. In analyzing why scouts didn't recognize the star talent in Dustin Pedroia, explains that our first instinct is often: to focus on what's flashy instead of what's fundamental to analyze data to death instead of looking at the broader picture to only value individuals who act or look noticeably "different" than the to place information into a small, preset number of categories 4. In the "post-Moneyball era," how would you describe the role and perceive portance of traditional scouting?
difficult to measure and predict? hitting (batting) defense (fielding) pitching how minor leaguers will fare in the major leagues 3. In analyzing why scouts didn't recognize the star talent in Dustin Pedroia, explains that our first instinct is often: to focus on what's flashy instead of what's fundamental to analyze data to death instead of looking at the broader picture to only value individuals who act or look noticeably "different" than the to place information into a small, preset number of categories 4. In the "post-Moneyball era," how would you describe the role and perceive portance of traditional scouting?
 pitching how minor leaguers will fare in the major leagues 3. In analyzing why scouts didn't recognize the star talent in Dustin Pedroia, explains that our first instinct is often: to focus on what's flashy instead of what's fundamental to analyze data to death instead of looking at the broader picture to only value individuals who act or look noticeably "different" than the to place information into a small, preset number of categories 4. In the "post-Moneyball era," how would you describe the role and perceive portance of traditional scouting? 5. Silver talks about innovators "thinking very big" and "thinking very small." 	2.	o hitting (batting) explains that our first instinct is often: to focus on what's flashy instead of what's fundamental to analyze data to death instead of looking at the broader picture to only value individuals who act or look noticeably "different" than the to place information into a small, preset number of categories In the "post-Moneyball era," how would you describe the role and perceive portance of traditional scouting? Silver talks about innovators "thinking very big" and "thinking very small."		o pitching to analyze data to death instead of looking at the broader picture to only value individuals who act or look noticeably "different" than the to place information into a small, preset number of categories 4. In the "post-Moneyball era," how would you describe the role and perceive portance of traditional scouting? 5. Silver talks about innovators "thinking very big" and "thinking very small."	3.	In analyzing why scouts didn't recognize the star talent in Dustin Pedroia, Silver explains that our first instinct is often:
portance of traditional scouting? 5. Silver talks about innovators "thinking very big" and "thinking very small."		 to analyze data to death instead of looking at the broader picture to only value individuals who act or look noticeably "different" than the norm
	4.	In the "post-Moneyball era," how would you describe the role and perceived importance of traditional scouting?
	5.	Silver talks about innovators "thinking very big" and "thinking very small." What does he say about this?

Name: ____

DATA 420 — Spring 2024